

£26.5million to restore UK's cemeteries and parks

08/01/2014

The Grade I registered Brompton Cemetery in West London, one of London's Magnificent Seven, is to be restored following an award of more than £3.7million of Lottery funding. It is one of the first cemeteries to receive funding through the Heritage Lottery Fund (HLF) and Big Lottery Fund's Parks for People programme and is amongst 15 historic parks and cemeteries across the UK receiving grants today.

This vital funding will see the historic landscapes of these parks and cemeteries restored, the wildlife habitats enhanced and facilities restored or opened up for local people to enjoy.

Carole Souter, Chief Executive of HLF, said on behalf of HLF and the Big Lottery Fund: "Eighteen years of Lottery investment in our public parks has transformed tired and in some cases under used green spaces into thriving community hubs. Our historic cemeteries, with their wealth of heritage, also offer huge untapped potential and we're delighted now to include them specifically in this programme."

Brompton Cemetery is of national importance. It was established in 1840 and was one of seven - including Highgate, Kensal Green and West Norwood - built around the Capital during mid-nineteen century to ease over-crowding in inner city church yards and burial grounds. There are 800 notable graves including Suffragette Emmeline Pankhurst, John Keats' fiancée Fanny Brawne and the inventor of the commercial Christmas card, Henry Cole. Also buried on the site are Chelsea Pensioners and commonwealth servicemen from the First and Second World Wars, which include thirteen Victoria Cross winners.

The cemetery contains six listed buildings and over 35,000 monuments. They include the Grade II* listed domed chapel built in the style of Basilica of St Peter in Rome which will be repaired and converted for use as an events and education space. The North Lodge will be transformed into a café, information centre and a base for the Friends group and volunteers. The project, led by The Royal Parks, will also restore the landscaping, create a new play area and help maintain the cemetery's diverse natural habitats.
