

Using digital in heritage: the 'absolute unit' way

25/02/2020

'Absolute Unit'. Credit: The Museum of English Rural Life, University of Reading
Adam Koszary, formerly the Digital Lead at the Museum of English Rural Life in Reading, tells us how heritage organisations can use digital to drive success.

"We had more research interest... more people come to the museum itself... and more money coming in."

- Adam Koszary

Watch the video to find out more:

Adam Koszary is Social Media and Content Editor at the Royal Academy of Arts. He was formerly Digital Lead at The Museum of English Rural Life (The MERL) in the University of Reading.

In the video Adam discusses The MERL's digital transformation project, including its viral 'absolute unit' tweets, and shares digital tips, ideas and advice that heritage organisations of all types and sizes can put to use.

Digital Skills for Heritage

Adam spoke to us for our Digital Skills for Heritage initiative, which aims to drive up digital capabilities across the heritage sector. Funding, training and support is available to heritage organisations and sector leaders.

You might also be interested in...

New initiative: Digital Skills for Heritage launches today

Kati Price

Putting digital to work in your heritage organisation

Digital Skills for Heritage: free posters for your workplace