

7 things to do in July

29/06/2018

The Piece Hall, Halifax

It's summertime, the sun is out and there's a huge amount on offer at National Lottery funded heritage attractions. Here are seven brilliant places to visit.

1. Sir David Attenborough has given his seal of approval...again!

Last month it was the newly-restored Temperate House at Kew, which everyone's favourite TV naturalist officially opened and described as 'breathtakingly beautiful'. This month, Sir David has reopened another National Lottery-funded attraction – the Museum of Zoology in Cambridge.

The museum has a two million-strong collection including the world's most complete dodo skeleton and an elephant that had a starring role in '2001: A Space Odyssey'. "Absolutely brilliant day out" according to a recent review on Tripadvisor. We couldn't agree more.

2. Spend a Saturday night at the movies in one of Scotland's first cinemas

Enjoy your popcorn and latest blockbuster movie in a cinema that's over 100 years old! Beautifully restored to its Art Nouveau elegance, the newly-opened Campbeltown Picture House now has two screens showing all the must-see summer releases.

It was one of the first cinemas to be built in Scotland and was designed with a unique and unusual 'atmospheric style'. You'll have to visit to discover what that means!

3. There's an exclusive freebie for National Lottery-playing aviation fans

Any National Lottery ticket or scratchcard will get you a half-price ride in the RAF Museum's #4D Cinema from 30 June to 7 July. The museum, in Hendon, North London, has just opened its amazing new Hangar One and it's full of incredible history and exhibits.

It's a brilliant place to visit at any time and it's just got a whole lot better thanks to this huge redevelopment, in time for the RAF's centenary year. The free offer is their way of saying thanks to National Lottery players for the money that has made it all possible – just turn up at the box office with any National Lottery ticket or proof of online purchase.

4. Hit the North...and its heritage

The Great Exhibition of the North is a free, summer-long celebration of the North of England's heritage and pioneering spirit. There's loads to see, including John Lennon's last piano and Stephenson's Rocket. Or why not take a free art, design or innovation tour of Newcastle and Gateshead (there's an app to get you on your way)?

Find out more on the Get North 2018 website. There's also a brilliant A History of the North in 100 Objects to explore online.

5. Get a taste of life on the ocean waves

Explore the grit and glory of life along Scotland's coastline in the remarkable new exhibition, 'Maritime Perspectives'. More than 80 stunning works of art have been brought together to showcase the diversity of this seafaring nation and show what life on the ocean is like.

The photographs, sculptures, oils, watercolours and sketches by renowned artists are on show at the Scottish Maritime Museum until 21 October.

6. Have a weekend break in Halifax and visit the Piece Hall

Have you ever seen the Piazza San Marco in Venice? Well imagine that – but in Yorkshire – and you've got the Piece Hall. We love it. It was opened in 1779, as a visible statement of the great wealth of the town's cloth merchants. It fell into disrepair but reopened earlier this year as a home to a treasure trove of independent shops and boutiques, thanks to £7.2million from the National Lottery. Halifax is now the 'Shoreditch of the North' according to the Guardian and the Telegraph. Don't let that put you off!

7. Go Wild in the Country (or town, or city)

The Wildlife Trusts looks after more than 2,300 nature reserves and the National Lottery is one of their most important sources of income. In fact, since 1994, National Lottery players have helped every eligible Wildlife Trust (that's 44, by the way!) right across the UK, ranging from city roadside verges to vast areas of land and coast.

Their mission? To make the world wilder and make nature part of life, for everyone. Whether you're in pursuit of awe-inspiring natural displays, a nature reserve with accessible paths, or a location with a little something extra, they can help you find it. What are you waiting for?

You might also be interested in...

News

Museum of Zoology reopens thanks to mammoth volunteer effort!

This week Sir David Attenborough will officially open the Museum of Zoology after a five-year renovation supported by National Lottery players.

18/06/2018

Campbeltown Brass Band playing in the main auditorium

News

Lights, Camera, Action for Campbeltown's restored atmospheric Picture House

One of Scotland's oldest, purpose-built cinema's, Campbeltown Picture House, has been re-launched after a £3.5million restoration and extension.

20/04/2018

The transformed RAF Museum London

News

Is the new RAF Museum on your radar?

The new RAF Museum London opens its doors this weekend following a multi-million pound transformation. It's reopening just in time to mark RAF100, but what can visitors expect?

27/06/2018

The Sill in Northumberland National Park is offering a virtual reality experience

News

Great things to do this summer: Great Exhibition of the North edition

It's time for the Great Exhibition of the North, which means a whole summer of great things to see and do.

19/06/2018

George Wyllie - Paper Boat

News

Remarkable new national art collection captures life along Scotland's coastline

The Scottish Maritime Museum will unveil a remarkable new national art collection featuring works by artists such as FCB Cadell, Ian Hamilton Finlay, Muirhead Bone, Kate Downie and John Bellany in a major art exhibition opening on Friday 1 June.

01/06/2018